OVERVIEW

The report provides estimates of the revenue reduction for a six-year period beginning with Fiscal Year 2025 for each exemption. Results of the estimates are listed without totals. The value of each sales tax and income tax exemption is considered independently which may result in duplication or overlap. For example, the value of food sales to nonprofits for distribution would be included in that specific exemption as well as in the value of the broader partial exemption of food for home consumption.

The estimated value provided would not necessarily be the same as the amount collected if a specific exemption was eliminated. Actual collections depend on other factors including compliance, actual liability, behavioral changes, timing, change in underlying assumptions, and overlapping exemptions.

Estimates are based on data from many sources. Tax records in the Department of Finance and Administration (DFA) were used when available. However, taxpayers are not required to provide detailed reporting of all transactions or income items subject to these exemptions. Therefore, tax returns do not contain sufficient information to estimate the value of most exemptions. Suitable and applicable data from outside sources, when available, must then be used. These sources may include federal agencies such as the Census Bureau, Internal Revenue Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Energy Information Administration, state agencies such as the Department of Education and the Department of Human Services, trade associations, and published studies, reports, and filings.

The value of some exemptions could not be determined due to a combination of absence of related collection data associated with the exemption and no relevant external data. When information for a specific exemption could not be establish, it is identified in the table as “cbe” or cannot be estimated.

The absence of collection data results from having no partial collection activity in the case of partial or fractional exemptions or discounts. Whereas the absence of external economic data associated with the exemption for estimation purposes often relates to the obscure category of activity involved in the exemption. This combination of data limitations is often associated with small niche activities.

A brief description of each exemption is provided but may not include all details necessary to determine eligibility. Legislative members, staff, and taxpayers should always use the full Arkansas Code citation and the DFA’s administrative rules.

Distributional analysis is provided for the selected exemptions above the size threshold specified in Act 819 and indicated in tables 1 and 2 with an asterisk and can be found in the appendix.

In the case of sales tax estimates, the value of the exemption is based on the state tax rate of 6.5%, unless indicated otherwise. The distribution of the 6.5% tax is to general revenue and several special revenue funds. Individual income tax collections are distributed to general revenue. Corporate income taxes are distributed to general revenue and the Work Force 2000 Development Fund.
